Clarion Borough is 57% low and moderate income and the recreation facilities serve those individuals who might not otherwise be able to afford other recreational activities. In addition, Clarion Borough is somewhat unique in that a large percentage of its land is tax exempt, limiting the ability of the Borough to financially afford such needed projects for its low and moderate income residents. Seventy-one percent (71%) of the property located in the Borough is tax exempt. Sixty percent of the 71% of tax-exempt property is owned by Clarion University of Pennsylvania. Due to legislative constraints, the Borough receives no payment in lieu of taxes from the University nor does it receive any revenues from the remaining tax exempt properties. A small percentage of property owners in the Borough are overtaxed to provide services to the entire community. With an aging population and limited resources, increasing tax revenues to cover project costs is not a viable option. The Borough, which is suffering the downturn of the anthracite industry, has recently invested several hundred thousand dollars into this facility and has identified, through the creativity of "self-help," a means to upgrade the playground, currently neither handicap accessible nor comply with playground safety standards. The purchase of the ADA compliant apparatus as well as surface safety compliant materials installation will provide the low and moderate income residents of the Borough recreational opportunities that they might otherwise not have. This investment will create short term jobs in the manufacture of playground components and, in the long term, will complement the economic development efforts of the Borough.
